Re: Chateaugay Wind Repower October Update

AES continues to advance the Chateaugay Wind Repowering Project following receipt of the project's final ORES siting permit in 2026. The existing Chateaugay Wind facility remains operational while the separate repowering project continues through development and pre-construction planning.

AES has continued engineering, permitting and compliance activities in preparation for the repower. The Wesson Group supports project engineering and construction planning, and AES has been advancing the project's design work, interconnection requirements and compliance filings. The project is expected to begin construction activities in 2027.

AES will continue coordinating with the Town of Chateaugay, Franklin County, ORES, project partners, participating landowners and other local stakeholders as planning advances. Additional information regarding decommissioning, construction activities and community outreach will be shared as schedules and milestones are confirmed.
